DR. STUART PREACHED AND LECTURED IN MARYVILLE.

HIS LECTURE WAS FINE

Second Number on Normal Course Pleased Large Audience—Two Services for Dr. Stuart.

Dr. George R. Stuart appeared before a Maryville audience for the second time Saturday night, when he gave his lecture on "Fun—Is It Devilish or Divine?" at the First M. E. church.

It is not possible to give a just report of the lecture, because it is bound to suffer, for the man and his ideas and illustrations are inimitable. Such a man as Dr. Stuart is a blessing to the world, for he brings a message so full of cheer and fun and good common sense that if all would heed the lessons he himself has learned the machinery of every-day life would run much smoother and real joy and contentment would come in performing the duties that are burdensome and monotonous many times.

He proved by actual facts that laughter is the life of the brain. He believes that God is responsible for the things that create fun and merriment, and said he believed he made the monkey and the parrot for the purpose of making people laugh. He does not believe that tears and sorrow are natural, for if they are, he said, why is it that God is going to wipe away all tears from our eyes as soon as we reach heaven? He showed the difference between fun and laughter and levity and revelry, one being creative of good health, the other in time being as sure to debauch the body and all sense of real fun and pleasure as the constant grouch and gloomy condition of mind is to bring disease and insanity. God made all things that gladden the heart and the eye, he believes, but had nothing to do with anything that brings sorrow and sin into the world, for he has done everything to destroy it, and whatever comes to us of an opposite nature is through a misunderstanding of Him and His will.

Dr. Stuart remained over in Maryville on Sunday and in the afternoon at 4 o'clock delivered a lecture to men only at the Christian church.

On Sunday evening Dr. Stuart occupied the Baptist church, all of the Protestant churches of the city joining in the services with the exception of the Christian church, which is now conducting revival meetings.

Dr. Stuart's talk Sunday night at the Baptist church was on the subject of "Brotherhood." As Dr. Stuart has been a regularly ordained minister of the M. E. church, South, for years, and in the pastorate until he was forced to the lecture platform, it cannot be said that he is a champion of lodges and various secret societies that are in existence because of the practical service they render to men and their families, but his talk last night was certainly a just rebuke to the churches for their lack in service in times of need.

Dr. Stuart declared that the lodges took up the thing that the churches deliberately laid down. He said if you asked a man if he was a Mason he would say yes, if he is, and that any man who belongs to any other of the fraternities would answer in the same decisive way if he is a member of any of these orders. But if you ask him or anyone else belonging to a church if he is a Christian or a child of God, the answer is always, "I hope so," or "I'm trying to be," or words to that effect.

Dr. Stuart added that if he had a child that would give such an answer to the question, "Are you Dr. Stuart's child?" he would most certainly administer a rebuke that child would not forget.

The shortcomings of our churches on the brotherhood question was very effectively pointed out and no one could take offense, for it is certainly true.

We hope Maryville will have the privilege of again hearing Dr. Stuart soon.

NEW LIBRARY AT BARNARD.

Mass Meeting Saturday Night Largely Attended and Was Enthusiastic.

Barnard is to have a public library that will be conducted on the order of the Maryville library. The office of the Barnard Bulletin was selected as the place for keeping the books, and will also be the reading room, so it was decided at a mass meeting held Saturday of the Barnard citizens. Dale Whitehurst, editor of the Bulletin, was chosen librarian and Miss Fannie Merrill assistant librarian.

Prof. David G. Cooper, principal of the Barnard schools, was chosen to lay the matter of a public library before the town board at its meeting to be held Friday night.

Another meeting will be held the coming Saturday night to further the plans for the library, and a selection of 500 books will be made and presented by the committee. A big banquet is to be given some time before Christmas for the benefit of the library fund.

A committee will be selected at Saturday night's meeting to solicit funds for the library.

FOR PARCELS POST.

Postmaster Trying to Find Out How Much Matter Will Be Sent From Here.

Under instructions from the postoffice department, Postmaster Beech is trying to determine to what extent the service will be used in Maryville. Questions are being sent by the postmasters to persons who are likely to make extensive use of the parcels post about the number, size and nature of parcels sent by them now, and the number they expect to send when the law goes into effect January 1.

The United States is divided into eight zones to determine the rates on the packages. A zone is determined by the distance separating the sender from the receiver of the parcel. The rate for the first zone, fifty miles, is 5 cents for one pound and 3 cents for each additional pound; for the second zone, fifty to one hundred and fifty miles, the rate is 6 cents for one pound and 4 cents for each additional pound. There is a corresponding increase for each of the eight zones.

Names of W. A. Hundley and J. M. Hamblen Added to Those Who Have Passed Away.

To do honor to the memory of two brothers whom death had claimed in the last twelve months, members of the Maryville lodge of B. P. O. Elks Sunday afternoon held their annual memorial services at the club house. There had been eleven deaths in that lodge since it was organized in Maryville several years ago.

The ritual work of the order was gone through, after which Rev. Lee Harrel of the Baptist church asked divine blessing. A solo was given by Rev. G. S. Cox, pastor of the First M. E. church, and also one by Miss Besse Scott, being very much enjoyed by the members of the lodge and the visitors who were in attendance at the services.

The memorial address was given by Rev. S. D. Harkness of the Presbyterian church. He spoke of how people should live rightly and how to do good to others. Rev. Harkness told the audience that the dinner that was given by the Elks on Thanksgiving day to forty children of Maryville was a very thoughtful act and one in which the club was to be praised for. After Rev. Harkness' address the benediction was given by Rev. Cox.

Following are the names of the members who have died: Tennie E. Haynes, Charles L. Robinson, Charles W. Twitchell, Charles I. Pixler Edwin V. Prather, Wm. T. Garrett, P. E. V. Morehouse, Wm. H. Totterdale, Ben Lyons, W. A. Hundley and J. M. Hamblen.

FOR SMALL SCHOOLS

CLASSIFICATION MADE IN ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

THREE CUPS TO BE GIVEN

St. Jooseph Central in Class A, Next Schools of From 100 to 500 Pupils, Third Schools Less Than 100.

At the time of the 1912 northwest inter-high school track meet and oratorical contest, which was held in this city last April, the executive committee recommended a meeting of a committee, which was appointed for the purpose of classifying the high schools of the northwest normal district. This classification was deemed advisable, as it would give the smaller high schools equal chances to win honors with the larger schools in the annual meet.

The classification committee met Saturday in St. Joseph and made the following classification:

Class A—St. Joseph Central.

Class B—High schools with more than 100 enrollment and less than 500.

Class C—High schools with less than 100 enrollment.

Three cups will be presented, namely, the championship cup to the school scoring the largest number of points; the class B trophy cup to the school scoring the largest number of points in that class or class C, and the class C cup, which goes to the school in class C scoring the most points.

This new classification should widen the interest and enlarge the entries of the annual contests, as the smaller schools who heretofore have really had no chance to win honors unless they were fortunate enough to possess a real star, will, beginning with next year, have an opportunity to get in on the cups and medals.

Prof. V. I. Moore of the Normal, secretary of the association, attended Saturday's meeting at St. Joseph, and he thinks the 1913 meet will surpass all previous affairs both in entries and attendance.

It is said that the young man's father, who favors the marriage, gave him $200 and told him to take her and go and get married. It seems that he has, and the whole Clyde community is watching for their return with much interest.

WAS GRANTED A DIVORCE.

Mrs. Alonzo Thompson Secured One Saturday and Alimony of $135,000.

Mrs. Annie Laura Thompson was granted a divorce Saturday from her aged and wealthy husband, Alonzo Thompson, by District Judge George W. Allen in Denver Col., on charges of desertion and non-support. Alonzo Thompson is well known in Maryville, having formerly lived here many years ago.

The decree carried with it an allowance of $125,000 permanent alimony and $10,000 attorney's fee. Saturday's decree was the culmination of half a dozen suits and cross-suits filed in the last six months.

Thompson, who is an octogenarian, says he accumulated a fortune estimated at more than one million dollars in the last twenty years by following the advice given by his father's spirit. Last July he left Denver, saying he learned through his father's spirit that his wife's son sought to have him placed in an asylum because of his spiritualistic beliefs.

Thompson owns property in South Dakota, Nebraska, Missouri and Tennessee.

SPIRITISM SAID TO BE DEMONISM.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come off the press setting forth with Bible proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of Demon origin. The writer traces his subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits personate the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pray, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demoniacal control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they possess their victim, and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-house. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but five cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism or who have friends interested therein. TWO KINDS OF COURAGE

The Kind Possessed by Karl Gardner Won.

By MILDRED HOUSTON HEMINGWAY.

The airship ran along the ground, then rose gracefully like the immense bird it resembled, while thousands watching craned their necks to follow its flight. One girl felt as though her heart was dragged out of her body and taken up on that dangerous journey. She did not know the aviator, had never seen him without his disfiguring cap and goggles, and yet she felt as though no one less brave than he could win her heart.

Elsie Burns came of a brave family. Her fathers from the beginning of American history had fought and conquered, and her mothers had borne their more quiet but none the less brave parts. The family history, bound in several cumbersome manuscript volumes, was very interesting to Elsie, and she had pored over it until she knew the deeds of her family by heart and panted for an occasion to distinguish herself. Incidentally she vowed not to marry until she found a man worthy a place in this honored ancestral biography. Small wonder that Karl Gardner found it difficult to please her, for Karl was slight of figure, not an athletic man, and thought it more than foolish for a man to risk life and limb in a pursuit as yet so untried.

"Do we really need to fly?" he asked, smiling a little. "See here, Elsie, here's an article I wish you'd read. It's on a woman's influence in every day life. I believe in what this writer says."

"Oh, dear," Elsie cried pettishly, "I'm so tired of hearing what a woman can do. Why doesn't someone write of what we can't do? I want to make a name for myself. There is nothing a woman can do these days. We can't vote; athletics are practically controlled by the men. Who ever heard of nice girls playing ball, or running professional races or being prize fighters? No, don't look at me that way; I mean it. I want to have some little bit of influence on the world."

The President Fixed His Eyes Sternly on the Man Before Him.

The following morning, Elsie had skipped over the article, not absorbing any of it, for her mind was filled with thoughts of the daring aviator who was to make another ascent at noon, and long before that hour she was in the field, watching eagerly for him.

In the meanwhile Karl was in deep waters. As confidential man in a large concern, he was placed in a very trying position. Inadvertently, he had come across certain records of financial speculations of the president, which undermined the safety of the institution. While his facts had not been secured through any confidence, his position was such that it made it very difficult for him to warn the other officials, and yet, on the other hand, he felt that they too trusted him. Finally he went to the president and told him of the discovery. That official was considerably startled, but promptly offered Karl a price for his silence, assuring him that within a month he could cover all shortages and the institution would be as sound as ever. The price was one that might have proved tempting except for one thing. The man to whom it was offered possessed moral courage in high degree. He might shrink from the dangers of aviation, but he dared to oppose any corruption even if it resulted in his own business destruction, for he realized what it would mean to make a relentless enemy of a man as influential as the president of the company. Still Karl was astute or he would not have held his position of confidential man. With a slight laugh, he said cordially:

"My dear Mr. Burns, you ought to know me better than that; still, I know you have to try out men. You know my honesty is not for sale."

The president fixed his eyes sternly on the man before him, then asked:

"What is your price? Didn't I make it enough?"

The battle was on; it must be fought with bare hands.

"My price," Karl said distinctly, "is the safety of the concern that employs me. Either you will cover your speculations from your own funds, or I'll put my facts before the board of directors."

"Why?" urged the president uneasily.

"Because I like you for one thing, because I love your daughter for another, and I do not intend that her faith in you and her love for the family name be shaken."

Karl Gardner was right; the president had allowed himself to be led astray by the lure of high finance. But stronger than his love of money was his love for the little girl, his only child. Yielding to his employe's courage, Mr. Burns went over the whole matter with him, and out of his private fortune made good the shortage. After it was all over, he said a little brokenly:

"Am I to lose my little girl?"

"I hope so," Karl said cheerfully, "if I can ever make her forget that I am not a man given to courageous exhibitions."

"She doesn't think you brave?" Mr. Burns asked in amazement.

"Not in the least, and I can't get my courage up to flying, or jumping in front of an automobile and stopping it by sheer physical strength," here he laughed as he looked at a reflection of his slight figure in the plate glass of the door, "and so she thinks me a coward."

"Indeed," Mr. Burns ejaculated, but that evening after dinner, just before Karl arrived, for it was Wednesday, he called his daughter to him and said earnestly:

"My little girl, I believe you are pretty proud of the courage of our family."

Elsie started to express her emphatic opinions on the subject, when he interrupted her.

"We both know a real hero, Elsie," and he told her the entire story, so that it was a very subdued little maiden who greeted Karl later in the evening. For a few minutes he paid no attention to her mood; then he asked:

"What is it, Elsie?"

"I know everything, Karl, and I am so proud of you and your bravery; but, oh dear me, I'm more insignificant than ever, for I haven't any kind of courage whatever."

As Karl gathered her into his arms he whispered:

"What do you suppose makes men brave and true, dear? Just their love for their women, and the longing to stand high in their confidence and respect."

A DELAYED HONEYMOON

Clerk Gets $20,000 for Marrying an Heiress.

By HAROLD CARTER.

It is generally worse when your wife bows to you coldly than when she cuts you. Especially is this the case when you have not seen her for a couple of years. So John Ferrand, who was neither divorced nor estranged from Mrs. John Ferrand, felt badly when he accidentally encountered her on the board walk at Atlantic City.

The meeting was accidental in that John had hoped to select the opportunity. But he had gone to Atlantic City to find her immediately after his return from Nevada, where, as the discoverer and subsequently as owner of the Diamond Silver mine, he had leaped into meteoric fame.

He hurried after her, and Edith, seeing him, halted and faced him.

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Ferrand," said John, ignoring the look of anger which she gave him. "I have always meant to return this purse to you. You left it behind at the Pennsylvania terminal."

"And you have carried it for these two years?" asked Edith Ferrand scornfully.

He bowed. "You see, I didn't know your address. And it seems to contain some papers," he said.

Edith took the purse and opened it.

* * * * * * *

Two years before Horace Mills, senior partner in the law firm of Mills and Hoppner, had called John Ferrand, one of his clerks, into his private office.

"Ferrand," said the head of the firm thoughtfully, "you have been with me for five years now."

"Yes, sir," answered the clerk.

"You have not shown a great aptitude for law, I think," said Mr. Mills, smiling faintly. "Nevertheless," he added, "I know you to be a man of sterling integrity. And I want such a man just now. Ferrand, did you ever think of getting married?"

"No, sir," John Ferrand answered.

"Would you be willing to remain a bachelor for the rest of your life for—well, say for twenty thousand dollars?"

Twenty thousand dollars! Ferrand thought of the men he had known, struggling to maintain families on two thousand a year—all he could ever hope to rise to, after years of service. For Ferrand had not the money-making instinct.

He Stammered Out His Love.

"Yes, sir," he said.

"Come in, Miss Kent," called the lawyer briskly, and Edith Kent stepped composedly into the room from Mr. Hoppner's office.

"Now, Ferrand, the situation is this," said Mr. Mills. "Miss Kent inherits four million dollars if she marries within a certain period. That period expires tomorrow night. She, like yourself, is not inclined toward matrimony. If you will go through the form of marriage with her, you will receive not twenty but fifty thousand dollars. Immediately after the ceremony you will depart and never see her or me again. I know I can rely on your honor. Do you agree?"

John thought of the mother whom he supported, of his little sister, destined to the drudgery of a stenographer's desk unless—

"I agree," he answered.

* * * * * * *

Love at first sight, at which we practical people scoff, is nevertheless, a not infrequent phenomenon. The strangeness of that agreement, a haunting memory of Miss Kent's blue eyes, her hauteur, her superb manners, her charm—above all that indefinable and elusive thing which we suddenly see in someone of the other sex, which sets the pulses throbbing and the heart yearning—this kept John Ferrand awake all night. And when the brief ceremony in the lawyer's office was over, Ferrand realized that for the first time in his life he was in love—deeply and wildly in love with this woman, his wife, whom he was never to claim. He choked; he could not look into her face.

"I thank you, Mr. Ferrand," she said composedly. "And now, since we shall never meet again—well, you may see me to the Pennsylvania terminal. I am going west to visit my sister. You have been paid?"

"More than paid," he stammered.

There were two hours to wait. They sat down in a restaurant to dine. Ferrand never afterward knew how it happened; he was conscious only of the misery of the impending separation. Like a man in a dream, or one delirious, he stammered out his love. He asked only a chance to win her some day, when he, too, had gone west and made a man of himself, demonstrated his right to win her. He ended by tearing the check to atoms and casting them on the floor. All the while Edith listened gravely.

"I don't think I have the right to utter a positive refusal, Mr. Ferrand," she answered. "You were foolish to destroy that check—but I honor you the more for it, and I shall not press the money on you. But I must think—I don't know."

But afterward, in the taxicab, she relented. He held her hand and poured out the words that bubbled to his lips unchecked. When they reached the booking office he knew that she could be conquered. If only there were time! Nevada....riches.... then to renew his suit....

She had purchased her ticket and stood on the step of the train. Her purse was in his hand. The train moved. He wanted to leap aboard hesitated; it moved more swiftly . . . Presently he was alone on the platform, still holding the little purse.

* * * * * * *

Edith opened the purse. "Suppose you look in that envelope," she said. "They are not papers, as you seem to believe."

John Ferrand tore open the flap. Inside was neatly folded a long printed slip—a railway ticket. Then from the released folds there fluttered—a second ticket. Ferrand stared at it dully.

"Good God!" he muttered. "What a fool I have been. If I had known! Edith!"

Edith was smiling now.

"I am staying at the Hotel Lafayette," she said softly.

Old and New London.

Stories come from London of the discovery of oil in one of the business quarters at a depth of 5,000 feet, and also of the uncovering at the corner of Paternoster row and St. Paul's alley of an ancient wall. This wall was part of the rampart which inclosed the old St. Paul's. The part uncovered, about 60 feet long, is made of chalk and rubble, and was built in the twelfth century. On the same site pieces of a Roman amphora, Roman vases and some Samian ware have also been found. Other "finds" include a camel's skull unearthed in High Holborn and a large quantity of pipes of the eighteenth century. Under some old stables in Bartholomew close—one of the oldest parts of London—three Norman arches have been found. They are close to one another, and are believed to have formed part of the cloisters of the priory which once stood on this site. Their excavation is likely to be a matter of considerable difficulty, as they are built in with stones and bricks for the new buildings which have been laid against them.

Frescoes of Orvieto.

Of the frescoes in the chapel of the Madonna di S. Brizio at Orvieto, which are being restored, says the Boston Transcript, Fra Angelico did two divisions of the vaulted ceiling. In one he represented "Christ in Glory," surrounded by angels, and in the other a group of prophets, seated upon clouds, tier upon tier. The frescoes were executed in the summer of 1447, the painter having negotiated the commission in order to escape from Rome during the summer heat. He undertook to return to Orvieto in the same months each year until the work was finished, but never went back after the first visit, for what reason is not known. Possibly because the death of one of his assistants through falling from the scaffolding soon after the decoration was begun was regarded as an evil omen. Misfortunes, at any rate, impeded progress, and it was not until fifty years later that Luca Signorelli completed the work Angelico had begun.

Longevity and Athletics.

In an editorial on "The Longevity of Athletes" the Interstate Medical Journal says that the harmfulness of "athletic training" is receiving a deserved amount of study now that the surgeon general of the United States navy has reported that officers noted as athletes during their cadet life were breaking down sooner than the non-athletic. Quoting the physical directors of some universities to the contrary, the writer says: "Marathon or playing football and all such unnatural contest requiring training of exceptional men not needing further development must be replaced by sports in which all can compete. To do this we must, of course, ignore the opinions of the men who make their living by the present system. They are all convinced they are right; and that very condition of mind blinds them to the significance of the facts published by Doctor Stokes. Any system which does not reduce the tuberculous condition of men is a failure and of no account."

Where Divorce Is Easy.

As to easy divorce neither Australia nor America leads the way, if we admit uncivilized tribes into the competition. Among some Siberian tribes, for instance, a man need only uncover his wife's head and walk away, and the Eskimo has only to leave his house and stop away in pretended anger for a day or two.

In Nepal a woman can divorce her husband at any time by simply placing a betel nut under his pillow and taking her departure. And two chopsticks broken in the presence of a witness are sufficient to divorce a couple in Cochin China.

A HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR

A Little Sage and Sulphur Makes Gray Hair Vanish—A Remedy for All Hair Troubles.

Who does not know the value of Sage and Sulphur for keeping the hair dark soft and glossy and in good condition. As a matter of fact, Sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than Sage and Sulphur, if properly prepared.

The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put out an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, in which Sage and Sulphur are combined with other valuable remedies for keeping the hair and scalp in clean, healthy condition.

If your hair is losing its color or constantly coming out, or if you are troubled with dandruff or dry, itchy scalp, get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, use it according to the simple directions, and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in the appearance of your hair.

All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented. Agent Koch Pharmacy.

DR. STUART PREACHED AND LECTURED IN MARYVILLE.

HIS LECTURE WAS FINE

Second Number on Normal Course Pleased Large Audience—Two Services for Dr. Stuart.

Dr. George R. Stuart appeared before a Maryville audience for the second time Saturday night, when he gave his lecture on "Fun—Is It Devilish or Divine?" at the First M. E. church.

It is not possible to give a just report of the lecture, because it is bound to suffer, for the man and his ideas and illustrations are inimitable. Such a man as Dr. Stuart is a blessing to the world, for he brings a message so full of cheer and fun and good common sense that if all would heed the lessons he himself has learned the machinery of every-day life would run much smoother and real joy and contentment would come in performing the duties that are burdensome and monotonous many times.

He proved by actual facts that laughter is the life of the brain. He believes that God is responsible for the things that create fun and merriment, and said he believed he made the monkey and the parrot for the purpose of making people laugh. He does not believe that tears and sorrow are natural, for if they are, he said, why is it that God is going to wipe away all tears from our eyes as soon as we reach heaven? He showed the difference between fun and laughter and levity and revelry, one being creative of good health, the other in time being as sure to debauch the body and all sense of real fun and pleasure as the constant grouch and gloomy condition of mind is to bring disease and insanity. God made all things that gladden the heart and the eye, he believes, but had nothing to do with anything that brings sorrow and sin into the world, for he has done everything to destroy it, and whatever comes to us of an opposite nature is through a misunderstanding of Him and His will.

Dr. Stuart remained over in Maryville on Sunday and in the afternoon at 4 o'clock delivered a lecture to men only at the Christian church.

On Sunday evening Dr. Stuart occupied the Baptist church, all of the Protestant churches of the city joining in the services with the exception of the Christian church, which is now conducting revival meetings.

Dr. Stuart's talk Sunday night at the Baptist church was on the subject of "Brotherhood." As Dr. Stuart has been a regularly ordained minister of the M. E. church, South, for years, and in the pastorate until he was forced to the lecture platform, it cannot be said that he is a champion of lodges and various secret societies that are in existence because of the practical service they render to men and their families, but his talk last night was certainly a just rebuke to the churches for their lack in service in times of need.

Dr. Stuart declared that the lodges took up the thing that the churches deliberately laid down. He said if you asked a man if he was a Mason he would say yes, if he is, and that any man who belongs to any other of the fraternities would answer in the same decisive way if he is a member of any of these orders. But if you ask him or anyone else belonging to a church if he is a Christian or a child of God, the answer is always, "I hope so," or "I'm trying to be," or words to that effect.

Dr. Stuart added that if he had a child that would give such an answer to the question, "Are you Dr. Stuart's child?" he would most certainly administer a rebuke that child would not forget.

The shortcomings of our churches on the brotherhood question was very effectively pointed out and no one could take offense, for it is certainly true.

We hope Maryville will have the privilege of again hearing Dr. Stuart soon.

NEW LIBRARY AT BARNARD.

Mass Meeting Saturday Night Largely Attended and Was Enthusiastic.

Barnard is to have a public library that will be conducted on the order of the Maryville library. The office of the Barnard Bulletin was selected as the place for keeping the books, and will also be the reading room, so it was decided at a mass meeting held Saturday of the Barnard citizens. Dale Whitehurst, editor of the Bulletin, was chosen librarian and Miss Fannie Merrill assistant librarian.

Prof. David G. Cooper, principal of the Barnard schools, was chosen to lay the matter of a public library before the town board at its meeting to be held Friday night.

Another meeting will be held the coming Saturday night to further the plans for the library, and a selection of 500 books will be made and presented by the committee. A big banquet is to be given some time before Christmas for the benefit of the library fund.

A committee will be selected at Saturday night's meeting to solicit funds for the library.

FOR PARCELS POST.

Postmaster Trying to Find Out How Much Matter Will Be Sent From Here.

Under instructions from the postoffice department, Postmaster Beech is trying to determine to what extent the service will be used in Maryville. Questions are being sent by the postmasters to persons who are likely to make extensive use of the parcels post about the number, size and nature of parcels sent by them now, and the number they expect to send when the law goes into effect January 1.

The United States is divided into eight zones to determine the rates on the packages. A zone is determined by the distance separating the sender from the receiver of the parcel. The rate for the first zone, fifty miles, is 5 cents for one pound and 3 cents for each additional pound; for the second zone, fifty to one hundred and fifty miles, the rate is 6 cents for one pound and 4 cents for each additional pound. There is a corresponding increase for each of the eight zones.

FOR THEIR MEMORIAL

HONOR DONE TO THE MEMORY OF DEPARTED ELKS.

TWO DIED DURING YEAR

Names of W. A. Hundley and J. M. Hamblen Added to Those Who Have Passed Away.

To do honor to the memory of two brothers whom death had claimed in the last twelve months, members of the Maryville lodge of B. P. O. Elks Sunday afternoon held their annual memorial services at the club house. There had been eleven deaths in that lodge since it was organized in Maryville several years ago.

The ritual work of the order was gone through, after which Rev. Lee Harrel of the Baptist church asked divine blessing. A solo was given by Rev. G. S. Cox, pastor of the First M. E. church, and also one by Miss Besse Scott, being very much enjoyed by the members of the lodge and the visitors who were in attendance at the services.

The memorial address was given by Rev. S. D. Harkness of the Presbyterian church. He spoke of how people should live rightly and how to do good to others. Rev. Harkness told the audience that the dinner that was given by the Elks on Thanksgiving day to forty children of Maryville was a very thoughtful act and one in which the club was to be praised for. After Rev. Harkness' address the benediction was given by Rev. Cox.

Following are the names of the members who have died: Tennie E. Haynes, Charles L. Robinson, Charles W. Twitchell, Charles I. Pixler Edwin V. Prather, Wm. T. Garrett, P. E. V. Morehouse, Wm. H. Totterdale, Ben Lyons, W. A. Hundley and J. M. Hamblen.

SUNDAY WAS A GOOD DAY.

FOR SMALL SCHOOLS

THREE CUPS TO BE GIVEN

St. Jooseph Central in Class A, Next Schools of From 100 to 500 Pupils, Third Schools Less Than 100.

At the time of the 1912 northwest inter-high school track meet and oratorical contest, which was held in this city last April, the executive committee recommended a meeting of a committee, which was appointed for the purpose of classifying the high schools of the northwest normal district. This classification was deemed advisable, as it would give the smaller high schools equal chances to win honors with the larger schools in the annual meet.

The classification committee met Saturday in St. Joseph and made the following classification:

Class A—St. Joseph Central.

Class B—High schools with more than 100 enrollment and less than 500.

Class C—High schools with less than 100 enrollment.

Three cups will be presented, namely, the championship cup to the school scoring the largest number of points; the class B trophy cup to the school scoring the largest number of points in that class or class C, and the class C cup, which goes to the school in class C scoring the most points.

This new classification should widen the interest and enlarge the entries of the annual contests, as the smaller schools who heretofore have really had no chance to win honors unless they were fortunate enough to possess a real star, will, beginning with next year, have an opportunity to get in on the cups and medals.

Prof. V. I. Moore of the Normal, secretary of the association, attended Saturday's meeting at St. Joseph, and he thinks the 1913 meet will surpass all previous affairs both in entries and attendance.

TO ATTEND MEETING.

The Northwest Missouri Dental society will meet in Chillicothe on Tuesday and Wednesday. Dr. Jesse Miller, Dr. E. C. Braniger and Dr. H. L. Stinson will attend this meeting and will leave this evening for Chillicothe.

ELOPEMENT AT CLYDE.

Young Couple Left Thanksgiving Dance and Planned Their Elopement—Not Yet Located.

Miss Missie Farnan, the 19-year-old daughter of Mrs. William Farnan of Conception, and Jesse Cogdill, son of Robert Cogdill, living near Clyde, attended the Thanksgiving dance at Clyde, and that night concluded to elope and get married. It is supposed they have gone to Kansas City, but it is not certain where they are.

The young man was not in favor with the young woman's mother. Mrs. Farnan went to Ravenwood and found the young couple left there Friday, but it is not known where they are now. It is said that the young man's father, who favors the marriage, gave him $200 and told him to take her and go and get married. It seems that he has, and the whole Clyde community is watching for their return with much interest.

WAS GRANTED A DIVORCE.

Mrs. Alonzo Thompson Secured One Saturday and Alimony of $135,000.

Mrs. Annie Laura Thompson was granted a divorce Saturday from her aged and wealthy husband, Alonzo Thompson, by District Judge George W. Allen in Denver Col., on charges of desertion and non-support. Alonzo Thompson is well known in Maryville, having formerly lived here many years ago.

The decree carried with it an allowance of $125,000 permanent alimony and $10,000 attorney's fee. Saturday's decree was the culmination of half a dozen suits and cross-suits filed in the last six months.

Thompson, who is an octogenarian, says he accumulated a fortune estimated at more than one million dollars in the last twenty years by following the advice given by his father's spirit. Last July he left Denver, saying he learned through his father's spirit that his wife's son sought to have him placed in an asylum because of his spiritualistic beliefs.

Thompson owns property in South Dakota, Nebraska, Missouri and Tennessee.

COURT AGAIN SATURDAY

A One-Day Session to Be Followed by a Ten-Day Session the Second Week in December.

Circuit court adjourned Saturday afternoon to Saturday, December 7, when a short session will be held as a land sale is to be held on that day. Then an adjournment will be taken from that date to Thursday, December 12, when a special term will be held. This term will last ten days and all cases left over from the November term will come up at that time. Most of the cases will be jury cases.

Two of the important cases are those against James Lane, charged with assault with intent to kill, and Charles Robinett, charged with carnal knowledge.

The jury in the case of John L. Anderson, a minor by next friend, Alma L. Anderson, interpleader in the case of W. T. Jackson vs. G. W. Anderson, found for the defendant. The following was the verdict of the jury:

"We, the jury, find for defendant Jackson that at the time of the seizure under writ of attachment of the property described in the interplea, said interpleader plaintiff was not the owner thereof."

C. M. Houston of this city, who was charged with stealing watches from the store of R. Deschauer, where he was employed, pleaded guilty in court Saturday afternoon to the charge of petit larceny, instead of grand larceny, and was fined $100 and given six months in the county jail. He was paroled for good cause shown, and upon payment of 50 and costs of the fine, and upon payment of $50 to his wife.

The fine of Bronson Taylor, who was tried by a jury recently, was made $100. The jury had returned a verdict fining Taylor $200, but this was in excess of statutory limit of $100.

A motion for new trial was filed in the case of M. B. Sherlock and John Nunnelly vs. Anderson Craig.

The estate goes now, in undivided fourths, to Mrs. Mattie Smith, the widow, and to Irving, George C., Jr., and Catherine Smith, children. George C. Smith was the founder of the Smith-McCord-Townsend Dry Goods company, Eighth street and Broadway. The estate consists mainly of 1,570 shares in that concern, valued at $440,000. Other assets bring the value up to $500,000.

The trust was created for ten years, but as all the children have now come of age, it was decided to end it. Leon Smith is at this time president of the company. He is a nephew of G. C. Smith, of whom J. W. Smith is a brother.

SPIRITISM SAID TO BE DEMONISM.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come off the press setting forth with Bible proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of Demon origin. The writer traces his subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits personate the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pray, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demoniacal control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they possess their victim, and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-house. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but five cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism or who have friends interested therein. TWO KINDS OF COURAGE

The Kind Possessed by Karl Gardner Won.

By MILDRED HOUSTON HEMINGWAY.

The airship ran along the ground, then rose gracefully like the immense bird it resembled, while thousands watching craned their necks to follow its flight. One girl felt as though her heart was dragged out of her body and taken up on that dangerous journey. She did not know the aviator, had never seen him without his disfiguring cap and goggles, and yet she felt as though no one less brave than he could win her heart.

Elsie Burns came of a brave family. Her fathers from the beginning of American history had fought and conquered, and her mothers had borne their more quiet but none the less brave parts. The family history, bound in several cumbersome manuscript volumes, was very interesting to Elsie, and she had pored over it until she knew the deeds of her family by heart and panted for an occasion to distinguish herself. Incidentally she vowed not to marry until she found a man worthy a place in this honored ancestral biography. Small wonder that Karl Gardner found it difficult to please her, for Karl was slight of figure, not an athletic man, and thought it more than foolish for a man to risk life and limb in a pursuit as yet so untried.

"Do we really need to fly?" he asked, smiling a little. "See here, Elsie, here's an article I wish you'd read. It's on a woman's influence in every day life. I believe in what this writer says."

"Oh, dear," Elsie cried pettishly, "I'm so tired of hearing what a woman can do. Why doesn't someone write of what we can't do? I want to make a name for myself. There is nothing a woman can do these days. We can't vote; athletics are practically controlled by the men. Who ever heard of nice girls playing ball, or running professional races or being prize fighters? No, don't look at me that way; I mean it. I want to have some little bit of influence on the world."

The President Fixed His Eyes Sternly on the Man Before Him.

The following morning, Elsie had skipped over the article, not absorbing any of it, for her mind was filled with thoughts of the daring aviator who was to make another ascent at noon, and long before that hour she was in the field, watching eagerly for him.

In the meanwhile Karl was in deep waters. As confidential man in a large concern, he was placed in a very trying position. Inadvertently, he had come across certain records of financial speculations of the president, which undermined the safety of the institution. While his facts had not been secured through any confidence, his position was such that it made it very difficult for him to warn the other officials, and yet, on the other hand, he felt that they too trusted him. Finally he went to the president and told him of the discovery. That official was considerably startled, but promptly offered Karl a price for his silence, assuring him that within a month he could cover all shortages and the institution would be as sound as ever. The price was one that might have proved tempting except for one thing. The man to whom it was offered possessed moral courage in high degree. He might shrink from the dangers of aviation, but he dared to oppose any corruption even if it resulted in his own business destruction, for he realized what it would mean to make a relentless enemy of a man as influential as the president of the company. Still Karl was astute or he would not have held his position of confidential man. With a slight laugh, he said cordially:

"My dear Mr. Burns, you ought to know me better than that; still, I know you have to try out men. You know my honesty is not for sale."

The president fixed his eyes sternly on the man before him, then asked:

"What is your price? Didn't I make it enough?"

The battle was on; it must be fought with bare hands.

"My price," Karl said distinctly, "is the safety of the concern that employs me. Either you will cover your speculations from your own funds, or I'll put my facts before the board of directors."

"Why?" urged the president uneasily.

"Because I like you for one thing, because I love your daughter for another, and I do not intend that her faith in you and her love for the family name be shaken."

Karl Gardner was right; the president had allowed himself to be led astray by the lure of high finance. But stronger than his love of money was his love for the little girl, his only child. Yielding to his employe's courage, Mr. Burns went over the whole matter with him, and out of his private fortune made good the shortage. After it was all over, he said a little brokenly:

"Am I to lose my little girl?"

"I hope so," Karl said cheerfully, "if I can ever make her forget that I am not a man given to courageous exhibitions."

"She doesn't think you brave?" Mr. Burns asked in amazement.

"Not in the least, and I can't get my courage up to flying, or jumping in front of an automobile and stopping it by sheer physical strength," here he laughed as he looked at a reflection of his slight figure in the plate glass of the door, "and so she thinks me a coward."

"Indeed," Mr. Burns ejaculated, but that evening after dinner, just before Karl arrived, for it was Wednesday, he called his daughter to him and said earnestly:

"My little girl, I believe you are pretty proud of the courage of our family."

Elsie started to express her emphatic opinions on the subject, when he interrupted her.

"We both know a real hero, Elsie," and he told her the entire story, so that it was a very subdued little maiden who greeted Karl later in the evening. For a few minutes he paid no attention to her mood; then he asked:

"What is it, Elsie?"

"I know everything, Karl, and I am so proud of you and your bravery; but, oh dear me, I'm more insignificant than ever, for I haven't any kind of courage whatever."

As Karl gathered her into his arms he whispered:

"What do you suppose makes men brave and true, dear? Just their love for their women, and the longing to stand high in their confidence and respect."

A DELAYED HONEYMOON

Clerk Gets $20,000 for Marrying an Heiress.

By HAROLD CARTER.

It is generally worse when your wife bows to you coldly than when she cuts you. Especially is this the case when you have not seen her for a couple of years. So John Ferrand, who was neither divorced nor estranged from Mrs. John Ferrand, felt badly when he accidentally encountered her on the board walk at Atlantic City.

The meeting was accidental in that John had hoped to select the opportunity. But he had gone to Atlantic City to find her, immediately after his return from Nevada, where, as the discoverer and subsequently as owner of the Diamond Silver mine, he had leaped into meteoric fame.

He hurried after her, and Edith, seeing him, halted and faced him.

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Ferrand," said John, ignoring the look of anger which she gave him. "I have always meant to return this purse to you. You left it behind at the Pennsylvania terminal."

"And you have carried it for these two years?" asked Edith Ferrand scornfully.

He bowed. "You see, I didn't know your address. And it seems to contain some papers," he said.

Edith took the purse and opened it.

* * * * * * * *

Two years before Horace Mills, senior partner in the law firm of Mills and Hoppner, had called John Ferrand, one of his clerks, into his private office.

"Ferrand," said the head of the firm thoughtfully, "you have been with me for five years now."

"Yes, sir," answered the clerk.

"You have not shown a great aptitude for law, I think," said Mr. Mills, smiling faintly. "Nevertheless," he added, "I know you to be a man of sterling integrity. And I want such a man just now. Ferrand, did you ever think of getting married?"

"No, sir," John Ferrand answered.

"Would you be willing to remain a bachelor for the rest of your life for—well, say for twenty thousand dollars?"

Twenty thousand dollars! Ferrand thought of the men he had known, struggling to maintain families on two thousand a year—all he could ever hope to rise to, after years of service. For Ferrand had not the money-making instinct.

He Stammered Out His Love.

"Yes, sir," he said.

"Come in, Miss Kent," called the lawyer briskly, and Edith Kent stepped composedly into the room from Mr. Hoppner's office.

"Now, Ferrand, the situation is this," said Mr. Mills. "Miss Kent inherits four million dollars if she marries within a certain period. That period expires tomorrow night. She, like yourself, is not inclined toward matrimony. If you will go through the form of marriage with her, you will receive not twenty but fifty thousand dollars. Immediately after the ceremony you will depart and never see her or me again. I know I can rely on your honor. Do you agree?"

John thought of the mother whom he supported, of his little sister, destined to the drudgery of a stenographer's desk unless—

"I agree," he answered.

* * * * * * * *

Love at first sight, at which we practical people scoff, is nevertheless, a not infrequent phenomenon. The strangeness of that agreement, a haunting memory of Miss Kent's blue eyes, her hauteur, her superb manners, her charm—above all that indefinable and elusive thing which we suddenly see in someone of the other sex, which sets the pulses throbbing and the heart yearning—this kept John Ferrand awake all night. And when the brief ceremony in the lawyer's office was over, Ferrand realized that for the first time in his life he was in love—deeply and wildly in love with this woman, his wife, whom he was never to claim. He choked; he could not look into her face.

"I thank you, Mr. Ferrand," she said composedly. "And now, since we shall never meet again—well, you may see me to the Pennsylvania terminal. I am going west to visit my sister. You have been paid?"

"More than paid," he stammered. There were two hours to wait. They sat down in a restaurant to dine. Ferrand never afterward knew how it happened; he was conscious only of the misery of the impending separation. Like a man in a dream, or one delirious, he stammered out his love. He asked only a chance to win her some day, when he, too, had gone west and made a man of himself, demonstrated his right to win her. He ended by tearing the check to atoms and casting them on the floor. All the while Edith listened gravely.

"I don't think I have the right to utter a positive refusal, Mr. Ferrand," she answered. "You were foolish to destroy that check—but I honor you the more for it, and I shall not press the money on you. But I must think—I don't know."

But afterward, in the taxicab, she relented. He held her hand and poured out the words that bubbled to his lips unchecked. When they reached the booking office he knew that she could be conquered. If only there were time! Nevada....riches.... then to renew his suit....

She had purchased her ticket and stood on the step of the train. Her purse was in his hand. The train moved. He wanted to leap aboard, hesitated; it moved more swiftly . . . Presently he was alone on the platform, still holding the little purse.

* * * * * * * *

Edith opened the purse. "Suppose you look in that envelope," she said. "They are not papers, as you seem to believe."

John Ferrand tore open the flap. Inside was neatly folded a long printed slip—a railway ticket. Then from the released folds there fluttered—a second ticket. Ferrand stared at it dully.

"Good God!" he muttered. "What a fool I have been. If I had known! Edith!"

Edith was smiling now.

"I am staying at the Hotel Lafayette," she said softly.

Old and New London.

Stories come from London of the discovery of oil in one of the business quarters at a depth of 5,000 feet, and also of the uncovering at the corner of Paternoster row and St. Paul's alley of an ancient wall. This wall was part of the rampart which inclosed the old St. Paul's. The part uncovered, about 60 feet long, is made of chalk and rubble, and was built in the twelfth century. On the same site pieces of a Roman amphora, Roman vases and some Samian ware have also been found. Other "finds" include a camel's skull unearthed in High Holborn and a large quantity of pipes of the eighteenth century. Under some old stables in Bartholomew-close—one of the oldest parts of London—three Norman arches have been found. They are close to one another, and are believed to have formed part of the cloisters of the priory which once stood on this site. Their excavation is likely to be a matter of considerable difficulty, as they are built in with stones and bricks for the new buildings which have been laid against them.

Frescoes of Orvieto.

Of the frescoes in the chapel of the Madonna di S. Brizio at Orvieto, which are being restored, says the Boston Transcript, Fra Angelico did two divisions of the vaulted ceiling. In one he represented "Christ in Glory," surrounded by angels, and in the other a group of prophets, seated upon clouds, tier upon tier. The frescoes were executed in the summer of 1447, the painter having negotiated the commission in order to escape from Rome during the summer heat. He undertook to return to Orvieto in the same months each year until the work was finished, but never went back after the first visit, for what reason is not known. Possibly because the death of one of his assistants through falling from the scaffolding soon after the decoration was begun was regarded as an evil omen. Misfortunes, at any rate, impeded progress, and it was not until fifty years later that Luca Signorelli completed the work Angelico had begun.

Longevity and Athletics.

In an editorial on "The Longevity of Athletes" the Interstate Medical Journal says that the harmfulness of "athletic training" is receiving a deserved amount of study now that the surgeon general of the United States navy has reported that officers noted as athletes during their cadet life were breaking down sooner than the non-athletic. Quoting the physical directors of some universities to the contrary, the writer says: "Marathon or playing football and all such unnatural contest requiring training of exceptional men not needing further development must be replaced by sports in which all can compete. To do this we must, of course, ignore the opinions of the men who make their living by the present system. They are all convinced they are right; and that very condition of mind blinds them to the significance of the facts published by Doctor Stokes. Any system which does not reduce the tuberculous condition of men is a failure and of no account."

Where Divorce Is Easy.

As to easy divorce neither Australia nor America leads the way, if we admit uncivilized tribes into the competition. Among some Siberian tribes, for instance, a man need only uncover his wife's head and walk away, and the Eskimo has only to leave his house and stop away in pretended anger for a day or two.

In Nepal a woman can divorce her husband at any time by simply placing a betel nut under his pillow and taking her departure. And two chopsticks broken in the presence of a witness are sufficient to divorce a couple in Cochin China.

A HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR

A Little Sage and Sulphur Makes Gray Hair Vanish—A Remedy for All Hair Troubles.

Who does not know the value of Sage and Sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy and in good condition. As a matter of fact, Sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than Sage and Sulphur, if properly prepared.

The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put out an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, in which Sage and Sulphur are combined with other valuable remedies for keeping the hair and scalp in clean, healthy condition.

If your hair is losing its color or constantly coming out, or if you are troubled with dandruff or dry, itchy scalp, get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, use it according to the simple directions, and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in the appearance of your hair.

All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.
